Life brings Changing Times

We are together just you and I. You are the changing moods, music and madness of humanity.

And I am the perpetual clock encassed in a globular glass, spinning on it's axis to the hum of the universe.

Together we move, gliding on the winds of youth and our path is lit by the burning souls of the dead.

We are reckless for we fear only our own existence, and we thrive upon the rebirth of forgotten souls.

We shall live with each life and yet each life shall be but a segment of our own.

The volume of our exactness shall be a mystery for all men, but for every man our music shall grow as he grows

And in the end we shall sound like the steeples of Death our message complete!

INDIVIDUALISM BLOSSOMS WITH OUTSI

Outside activities are a major part of every student's life. Many Elmhurst students pursued outside interests through long hours of daily practice, while others continued their activities as hobbies during their spare time.

No longer does weather prevent out-of-door activities, as public facilities provide the community with indoor swimming pools, skating rinks and riding arenas. This allows continued involvement in activities throughout the year.

Outside interests also broke the monotony of the day, providing the student with enjoyment as well as contentment, after accomplishment in his particular field of interest.

Daily practice in Huntington aids senior Steve Williams in perfecting his butterfly stroke. Executing a sit spin, senior Nancy Fishman displays her skating ability with balance and form.

Correct ussage of hands, legs, weight and balance is necessary in jumping as exhibited by senior Mary Johnson.

SELF EXPRESSION

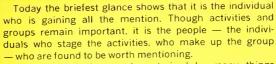

These individuals are characterized by many things—the factors that motivate them, the activities they participate in, the way they walk, even the clothing they wear.

The fact that youth of the seventies are dressing so differently is not as important as the fact that there is so much room for variation from girl to girl, from guy to guy. In clothing today almost anything goes, and the get-up can many times express the students' personality.

Clothing? At first glance, is there a better way to illustrate an individual than through what he wears?

Girls break athletic tradition, participate in intermural sport

In a succession of shots, sophomore Sally Hinton serves a crucial point to win the match, trying to set score at three-all.

Despite losses and rainy weather, the girls tennis team gained experience and understanding of the game. Practicing daily after school and Saturday mornings at the Waynedale tennis courts, the team consisted of only two seniors, three juniors, and four sophomores.

Four single and three double matches were played each game, as the girls alternated positions. More simplified than men's tennis, a different method of scoring was used. The first double or single player to win eight games would take the set, and gain a point for her team.

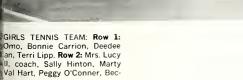

Backing her doubles partner, sophomore Deedee Whitman watches as sophomore Bonnie Carrion follows through on her return shot.

Set for a return shot, Mary Omo volleys the ball successfully across the net to her opponent.

Announcement of the queen elicits varied responses by candidates Sandy Shrock, junior attendant; Cindy Hunt, the new queen; Gwen Burns, senior attendant; and Penny Ress, spin more attendant; as past queen we Ransom is escorted by junior Ke Buller.

PIRIT HIGH DESPITE LOSS

Amidst a chilly, clear starlit night, the 1973 annual homecoming celebration took place. Spirit prevailed, though the Trojan grid suffered a 21-7 loss by defending city champions, the Bishop Luers Knights. Despite mud and chill, an abundant enthusiastic crowd attended the game. However, dampness prevented the band from marching, causing the Trojan musicians to perform in the stands.

mittee members, after taking up a schoolwide collection totaling over $125, provided decorations for the evening festivities. Highlighting halftime activities was the coronation of 1973 Homecoming Queen, senior Cindy Hunt.

Displaying a picture portraying starving people during the depression, a guest performer presents a program on the 1930's.

Demonstrating the art of "spaceball," a guest trampolinist uses his skills to down Trojan volunteers, 6-4.

Guest speakers and performers numbered few as student actions and apathy caused a shortage in the number of assemblies given throughout the year. Assemblies were made voluntary, and students had the choice of going to study hall or to the program.

Performed and designed solely by Elmhurst black students, a Black History Week assembly was presented comemorating the week.

Exhibiting trampoline feats, a guest gymnast presented a program to students. At a later date, a guest performer gave a performance on the 1930's.

Presenting a "basketball game," senior hoopsters tried to arouse student interest, while the jazz band performed before classes in a campaign to boost ticket sales for the jazz festival.

'CACTUS FLOWER' ALLOWS ROLE VARIETY

Several roles privided for a variety of characters in Abe Burnows' comedy "Cautus Flower," as juniors Al Rutledge and Randy Collins took on the male leads while seniors Barb Young and Territure played the female leads.

Opening the play. Toni Simmons, portrayed by Terri Lipp, attempts suicide because Dr. Julian Winston, played by Al Ruffedge, has wounded her emotionally. However, Toni's plan is folled when Randy Collins as Igor Sullivan stumbles into the scene. The entire comedy evolves around Julian attempting to rotain his backelor status by using his nurse as a fake wife in order to prevent matrimony.

Other roles included seniors John Haylman as Harvey Greenfield; Nancy Bullenbacher as Mrs. Dixon Durant, a patient of the doctor; and Glenn Rediger as a music lover and waiter. Juniors John Wright played Senor Arturo Sanchez; John Davis a customer; and Jaki Joseph as Baticelli. Springtime, Harvey's girlfriend.

Crow members included senior Jody Dell as stage manager and in charge of publicity. Lights were handled by seniors Leslie Line and Nancy Ostrognai with Beth Miller in charge of props and costumes. Glenn Rediger controlled sound and aided in the construction of the set along with other stage craft class members.

JONES-LEWIS DRAV

Mel Lewis contributes drumming ability to an enthusiastic capacity crowd, while Thad Jones directs.

Featuring the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Jazz Ensemble, Elmhurst's fourth annual jazz festival was held March 9 and 10, the first festival to include two days.

Twenty Indiana high school bands competed in the Saturday afternoon event. As Elmhurst was hosting the event, the jazz band did not participate in the competition.

Playing to a capacity crowd, the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Ensemble from New York, performed Saturday evening along with the Elmhurst Jazz Band and the John Adams and Guest saxophone soloist, Dick Quigley joins with junior Jack Alexander in a saxophone modley.

North Side High bands, the two winners of the afternoon band competition. The previous night's performance included Indiana collegiate bands: Ball State University, Indiana State University, Indiana State University and the Elkhart Assemblage, along with the Elmhurst jazz ensemble.

Because of the sell-out crowd, the net profit from the festival totalled approximately $3,000, making the festival the most successful, financially. $2,000 was transferred from the profit to help dimish the then present uniform debt.

ELL-OUT AUDIENCE

Travel allows venture in international living

Participating in the Experiment in International Living, senior Sue Quance spent the summer on a Swiss farm. Driving the tractor, bailing hay and picking and hanging tobacco were only a few of Sue's farm chures, though she also found time to hike and sightsec.

Arriving from Weinheim, Germany, Claudia Weiss participated in the American Field Service exchange student program. Claudia stayed with senior Sally Cline the eleven months she attended Elmhurst and participated in the Elmhurst Orchestra as well as the All-City Orchestra.

Miss Anne Welle-Strand from Norway visited the United States with the Experiment in International Living also. Speaking in foreign language, history and English classes. Miss Welle-Strand spent three weeks at Elmhurst during her year-long stay.

Juniors John Knettle and Cathy White were selected as AFS foreign exchange students. While John hoped to visit Africa during the summer months, Cathy chose a European country as preference for her year of traveling.

Transferred from Taipei, Taiwan, When-Chi-Chen and her brother Wen-Te-Chen attended Elmhurst for a few months during the school term. They stayed with their uncle, Peter Hon, until they were joined by their parents a few months later to continue their trip.

Most German schools house approximately 1500 students, and usually include grades five through thirteen in one building.

Nestled in the hills of Ressudens, Switzerland, a tobaccon farm provided a home for Sue Quance during her summer stay in Europe.

Singing with the Elmhurst Chorale, When-Chi-Chen and her brother, Wen-Te-Chen, visiting from Taiwan, make friends during their stay in the United States.

Claudia Weiss home in Weinheim, Germany, proves to be quite similar to a modern house in the Unites States.

Out-of-door activities prevail in Switzerland as hiking and climbing mountains are popular pastimes.

Wandering in and out of the crowds, Claudia Weiss, German exchange student, enjoys a day at the carnival in Heidelberg, Germany.

Rusting in a park in Artisterdam, Helland, Sue Quarico and her United States exchange student triends take time active relies.

Prom '73

Junior Sarah Burgess regined as queen over the 1973 junior-senior prom on May 12. Attending her were juniors Pam Arnold, Val Feeback, Starla Goshorn, Quay Howell, Jane Nelson and Sandy Schrock. Approximately 150 couples attended the formal dance at Hospitality Inn. Iron Horse entertained at Lochness Inn for the PTA sponsored after-prom.

Much to our great displeasure, neither the photographer who took our prom pictures or his film could be located. We have had to substitute pictures of those couples who were photographed at the dance. — THE STAFF

Buses Provide Transportation for Majority of EHS Students

Eighteen buses provided transportation to and from school for the majority of Elmhurst students. Some students were picked up as early as 7:05, while others as late as 7:05

Cars also provided a means to school, though this seemed to lead to more truancy. "If all students came on buses, this would cut our problems in half," stated Dean of Boys. Mr. William Geyer. He went on to say "while 405 cars fill the parking lot each day, only about 50 should be driving." Driving to school had become more of a status symbol than being a necessary means of transportation.

Bikes and motorcycles representing a small minority, completed the roster white even a smaller number of students walked to school

Presented by its founder Clarence Biedenweg, the Biendenweg Boys Physical Education award was presented to junior Pete McCampbell.

Winners of major awards: Bob Paschall, Blanket and Sertoma awards; Steve Miller, Danforth "I Dare You" award; Sue Quaance, Danforth "I Dare You" and Kiwanis Good Citizenship awards; John Hoard, DAR good citizenship award; and Barb Anderson, DAR good citizenship award pose in the courtyard.

Outstanding students recognized by school

Recognition awards were given to students Tuesday evening, May 29. This was the second consecutive year the event has been held in the evening, as it was previously held during school hours.

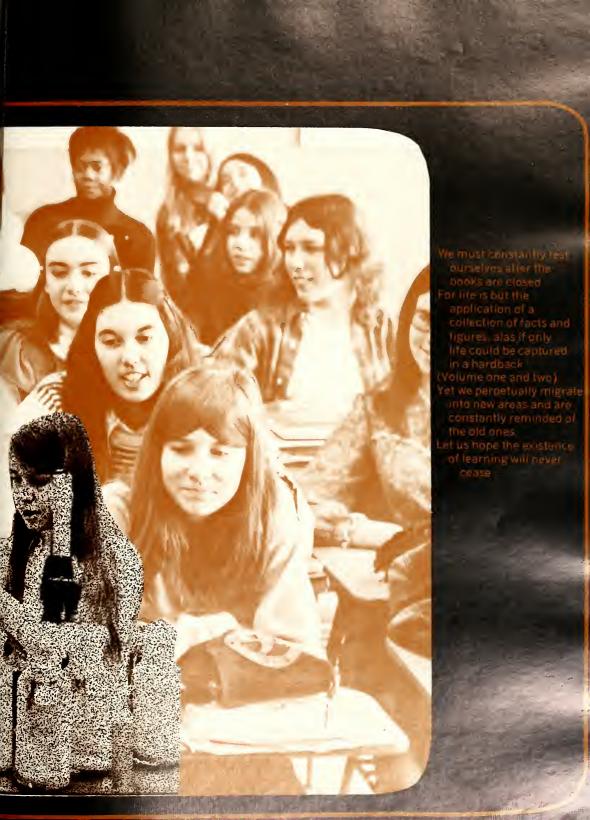

Compiling the awards and organizing Recognition Night, Mr. Robert Passwater was assisted by Barb Anderson. Mr. Don Goss, art teacher and senior Barb Young, worked on slides shown during the awards presentation.

Members of the faculty and administration presented the awards to the honored students, while a speech was given by Barb Young in recognition of Principal Charles Eickhoff for his many years in the field of education.

Discussing award recipients, seniors Tom Boyer, Greg Bussard and Randy Miller wait for their recognition.

Congratulating outstanding athletes of individual sports, athletic director Jerry Bush presents plaques to Bernie Kampschmidt, Kevin Howell, Jeff Hibler, Harold Essex, Nat Brown and Paul Watters.

Journalism classes prepare future work for publications

Journalism classes spent the year learning the different aspects of a newspaper and year-book. Advanced Journalism classes put these ideas to work in producing the ADVANCE and the ANLIBRUM.

Journalism I classes met for one semester while working on dummy layouts for both the newspaper and yearbook. During the second semester, these students were then able to contribute and assume positions on the publications. Students learned the essentials of cropping pictures, writing, fitting copy and counting headlines.

Advanced Journalism classes were for staff members of the ADVANCE and the ANLIBRUM. It allowed class credit for the planning and production of the publications.

Frustration mounts when trying to think of a new approach for a feature story as junior Janet Bell, feature editor of the AD-VANCE, learns quickly.

Taking care of the money sent in for newspaper advertisements, junior Val Hart keeps careful check of the money she has received in her Advanced Journalism course.

Finishing a paste-up for an issue of the ADVANCE in Advanced Journalism class, junior Bill Watson tries to locate a "lost" cartoon.

Limbering musices is a painful experience as these girls find out in preparation for working in gymnastics. It seems necessary for a good performance.

Adding support to the arm of sophomore Dave Humphrey, Mr. John Sweet helps him through a vault around the side of the horse.

Jumping over human pyramids, sophomore Larry Baatz may end up with a slight headache when he finishes his roll over his classmates.

Receiving aid from sophomore Pat Winniker gives sophomore Tammy Schecter a little assurance as she continues her routine on the uneven parallel bars.

Variety in gym leads well-rounded year in boys', girls' classes

Group sports along with individual sports led to a wellrounded year in physical education.

The boys' and girls' gym classes switched gyms while the girls played basketball and the boys worked in gymnastics. The boys' classes not only worked on the horse, but also on the even parallel bars.

Girls' sports this year included a special demonstration in self-defense, archery, track and field, volleyball and bowling. The boys' gym classes spent their time working in basketball, gymnastics, volleyball, track and competing in a wrestling championship. Both groups stressed physical fitness.

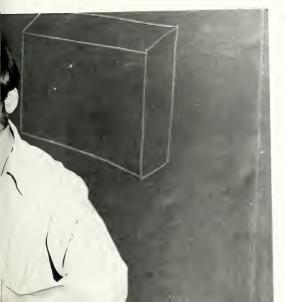

Making one of his projects in woods, sophomore Warren Roberts forms the cup on one of the many machines used in working with carpentry.

Industrial Arts classes help students to release tension

Using the light top drafting board to complete his assignment, sophomore Dale Roesner draws a line to finish his work during the class period.

Working in the fields of metal work, drafting and carpentry, Industrial Arts students escaped the mental tension by working with their hands.

Carpentry classes selected what they wanted to do themselves by what interested them. They learned the process for construction of projects and the use and care of tools.

Practical experience in grinding for metals class was taught by the making of projects assigned by Mr. Gary Eager. Projects for the first semester included screwdrivers and for the second semester tool boxes were made. Advanced classes were able to choose what they wanted to make.

Drafting classes changed different objects into smaller scale drawings. Mechanical and architectural drawings were completed during the year.

Getting the exact measurements for his drawing, sophomore Mike Jeffry works on a drafting assignment in his Industrial Arts class

Home Economics prepares girls for future in homemaking

Cutting out her patterns is an essential part of dressmaking as sophomore Kay Coleman learns as she finishes cutting out her pattern in Home Ec.

Tasting the creations they made in their foods class, junior Debbie Creason and junior Trudy Oberkeiser comment on its taste.

Girls in sewing classes were able to choose any pattern they wanted, even though they were required to follow basic guidelines. The girls made skirts, pants, jackets, or whatever they needed to fill out their own wardrobe. Tailoring classes were required to make tailored coats or jackets.

Foods classes spent their time making dishes to creat a full meal. A guest speaker demonstrated the different ways in which to decorate a cake. The girls then made various kinds of cakes and used the different methods to decorate them.

One of the next steps, and most important is sewing the outfit together and sophomores Mary McBride and Pam Mabee find this can become tedious work.

Getting ready to sew a seam in her outfit, sophomore Teddie Stefanski checks to make sure everything on her machine is correct before she starts.

Using the wave propagation machine in an experiment in physics, senior Jim Ross watches as the waves illuminate on the paper below the machine.

Looking at the various organs of a fetal pig, seniors John Alvarez, Chris Berry and Steve Williams prepare to start their dissection in biology.

Experiments aid science program

Slides and films were used in the biology lasses to help supplement the course study. A special research project was required this rear. Human physiology was studied at the end of the year. Students dissected different animals from one of the simplest to one of the most complex.

Physics classes did experiments to help hem with the book study. Some of these ncluded working with electricity, mechanics n motion, expansion in metals and heat of fusion.

In the chemistry classes, different properies were studied and further explored. This comprised working in conservation of mass and equilibrium and oxidation of reduction and reaction. Students were given unknown chemical solutions and had to come up with what they were composed of.

Ecology classes went on various field trips to help them in their studies. Speakers were also invited to the school and spoke to the different classes.

Experimenting with weights and pulleys in relation to the force of gravity, senior Hans Zorn completes his problem in his physics class.

As junior Bob Moyer looks for different organisms, Mr. Allan Haller checks to see what senior Eric Spears has found.

Speech classes aid public speaking

Speech classes were available to anyone who wished to learn the art of public speaking. Giving, or listening, to speeches daily gave the students knowledge of poise and public speaking. Listening and watching other speakers helped to give the other students ideas on different methods of public speaking.

Fourteen speeches were required to be given in one semester. Speeches were written in class with the students trying to get the main ideas of their speeches across. The students strived to do this in the most effective ways possible.

In giving the speeches, students perfected their own use of eye contact and hand gestures. These were important in keeping the attention of their audience. They were also used in conveying their messages.

Hand motions are an essential part of getting the point of your speech across, senior Lee Robinson finds out as he gives one of his many speeches in class. Practicing her speech on senior Bruce MacAfee, junio Debbie Fremion works to get the correct pronunciation before giving it to the rest of the class.

Eye contact is vital to senior Cheryl Miller in trying to convey her speech to her audience.

Giving speeches is part of the daily tasks as senior John Hoard rapidly finds out.

Elective English sparks new interest

A new English program was set up thi year for juniors and seniors. They were abl to choose from a variety of classes relate to English. Each class lasted one semeste and the students then picked another clas to take at the start of the second semester the classes were phased according to the degree of difficulty of the class and how mucl work is expected out of the students.

Mass Media, which was taught by Mis Susan Highfill, explored the different area of communication. Television, radio and newspapers were included. Various speaker came and spoke to the classes. One of the classes wrote and performed a skit for the Christmas assembly.

Several literature courses were offered ranging from Utopian Literature to Nobe Prize Authors. Also available were composition courses where students were able to express themselves in any kind of literary form.

Finishing reading an assignment before discussing in class, senior Hans Zorn tries to remember the mair points of the story.

Making a point about the book Future Shock, junior Jim Butler joins the class discussion in his English Class.

Leading junior John Greenler in a Truth Walk, junior Susie Bouet shows confidence so as not to lead him into anything.

Doing a skit for the annual Christmas assembly. Miss Susan Highfill's Mass Media class portrays dogs led by Santa Claus in singing 'Jingle Bells."

Taking advantage of class time to read an assignment, senior Michelle Frey tries to finish it by the end of the class period so as not to take it home.

Writing a composition, junior Shelley Boester begins the long task of compiling facts and ideas on paper.

Looking for some new materials in the cabinet, sophomore Melanie Lorman comes closer to finishing the required course for all sophomores in the reading lab.

Giving a sales pitch for her box of cards, senior Kathy Free builds up the advantages of her cards in trying to sell them in a class project for drama.

English, Drama add new subjects for class ideas

Sophomore English classes were the only regular English classes held this year. The basic plans for literature and grammar were followed through out the year. Requirements for all sophomores included the reading of the play Julius Caesar by William Shakespeare. Our Town by Thornton Wilder, and The Red Badge of Courage by Stephan Crane.

Several of the English classes had the students writing original plays, fairy tales, or copying shows already on television. They were then produced in front of the classes by the students. Miss Susan Highfill's classes video-taped their plays and were then able to play them back.

Drama was one of the new elective English courses offered this year. It was held for only one semester and available to juniors and seniors. The course was taught by Mr. Robert Stookey. Pantomimes and plays were produced throughout the year by the students.

Working together in their drama class, senior Tom Kennerk and junior Colleen Harvey practice their parts to try to near perfec-

Reading a story and then discussing it in groups is part of the class curriculum in some of the sophomore English classes as these students find out.

Showing sophomore Margo Knopp the proper way to use a voting machine, Mr. Aaron Still explains how to vote a straight ticket and how to choose candidates from different political parties.

Writing a report in her social studies class, senior Renee Fry completes one of the many requirements needed to get a passing grade.

Social studies lends new awareness

In the Social Studies department, students ained necessary awareness in the historical, colitical and social happenings of the world.

U.S. history classes tried to teach the stulents the events which occurred to form their country. They also learned of several aspects of the government.

In the world history classes, which were available to all sophomores, students used special reports to add to the book material. Class discussions compared the forming of oreign countries to that of the United States.

Seniors were required to take one semester of government and one semester of either sociology or economics. Economic students studied the commerce and sociology classes earned of man's social behavior. Government classes studies the United States Constitution and other departments of the federal government.

Explaining to his class different aspects of U.S. history, Mr. Nick Werling points out important events which led to the formation of the United States.

Taking notes to help prepare themselves for future tests, seniors Tom Suedhoff and Joe Brewer listen carefully so as not to miss anything.

Math defines new principles and theorems

A clearer understanding of mathematical techniques and methods was developed. Students worked in specialized courses in all aspects of math to gain new knowledge.

Beginning algebra students gained necessary insight to go on to study higher mathematics. Different principles learned in the first year algebra classes by the students were extended in the geometry classes. Students applied present and past knowledge which aided the advanced algebra students as they thought over theorem interpretation and problem solving.

Trigonometry, that was based on sine and cosine functions, involved students in graphing and wave line patterns. Concentrating on functional notation, vector magnitude and description of solution sets of inequalities were the analytic geometry classes.

Listening as the teacher explains new problems in his algebra class, junior Bob Busian carefully pays attention to be able to apply it later.

Drawing a graph on the board to help simplify a difficult problem, junior Dave Johnson then explains to the class the procedures he followed to get the answer.

Working with inequalities in her Fundamentals of Algebra class sophomore. Cindy Bradtmiller works to finish her problem at the board.

Watching as Mr. Warren Hoover proves several new theorems, his geometry class remembers so as to use them in the next assignment.

Waiting for the bell to ring, seniors Walter Mullins and Michelle Frey discuss the advantages and disadvantages of their respective jobs.

As he prepares to go to his job at Baker's Shoe Store in Southtown Mall, senior Rick Owens finishes his homework.

Working together in the distributive education class, seniors Geraldine Fowlkes and Becky Hall help each other with a difficult problem.

Co-op aids learning, working experience

Co-op education allowed students to gain working experience while still in high school. They went to school during the morning and in the afternoon they went to their various jobs.

It was a city-wide program in which the six city high schools participated.

Approximately 45 students out of the school enrollment have jobs under the program. These students include both juniors and seniors. They have to be members of either the DECA or OEA clubs.

Seniors received six credits for the entire school year. This was broken into four credits for the job itself and two credits for the class.

Making sure her pay check is made out for the correct amount, senior Michelle Frey has to wait to cash it after school.

Musicians fill school year with practice, shows

Training choirs, in preparation for concert choir and Trojan Singers, developed tone qualities and worked on breathing exercises. Concert choir worked on various songs to perform at their different concerts. The training choirs, concert choir, and Trojan Singers were all directed by Mr. Al Schmutz.

Marching band, performing during half-time at the home football games, practiced during the summer and after school at the beginning of the school year. The different sections of the band worked separately before putting it all together in the concert band. The band practiced on many numbers to perform at school functions and assemblies. The bands were all under the direction of Mr. Randy Brugh.

Practicing their own parts before joining the full orchestra were the string ensembles. The orchestra, directed by Mr. John Morse, performed at various school functions throughout the year.

Watching Mr. Al Schmutz direct, senior Kevin Hoy and sophomore Nina Marchese check to make sure they're singing the correct intenstins.

Playing their parts in band, sophomore: Tom Haydn and Mary Oswalt practice or their clarinets before putting it in with the rest of the band.

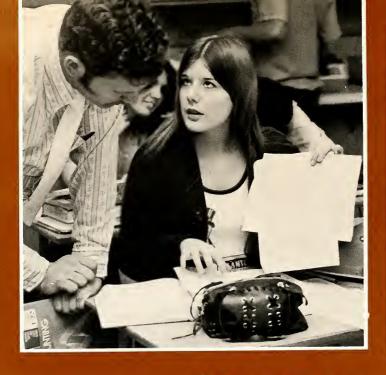

While using the megaphone, Mr. Randy Brugh shouts instructions to the marching band. The band performed during half-time at the games.

Preparing for future concerts, the varsity choir practices one of its many songs under the direction of Mr. Al Schmutz. The choir also sang at many school assemblies.

Asking for advice in Accounting, junior Linda Crum looks to Mr. Russell Miller, a student teacher for help on the problem.

Needing help with a problem in recordkeeping, sophomore Pat Winniker asks Mrs. Beverly Ewing for help in solving the problems.

Business careers relevant with offered courses

Typing a business letter from the teaching manuel, senior Renee Thompson practices on an electric typewriter.

Accounting classes were aided this year by the use of new adding machines acquired at the end of last year. Students practiced both bookkeeping and accounting. After taking these courses, students should be able to get business jobs without further training.

In personal typing classes, students learned the basic keyboard, and then put it to their own uses. Typing classes worked with both manual and electric typewriters. Other classes prepared for typing in business offices.

All business courses helped students prepare for future careers. Many areas of the business world were studied. Courses included were accounting, typing, business law, recordkeeping and business arithmetic.

Memorization of the chart for touch typing is a must for junior Jeff Morsches as he learns the basic techniques for typing.

Finishing the sketch of Mrs. Sharon Banks' daughter, senior John Hughes prepares to give it to her as a gift. The sketch now hangs in Mrs. Banks' office.

Working with ink drawings, sophomore Sherry Workman concentrates on her work to get the exact dimensions on her own drawing while working in art class.

Projects, awards broaden interests; Artists decorate halls and cafeteria

Receiving nominations in the 1973 Northwestern Indiana Regional High School Scholastic Art Awards Contest were senior Miguel Torrez for the national Hallmark Honor Prize, senior Pete Turnley and junior Chris Dusendschon for the Kodak Medallion of Excellence. Their three entries will be sent to New York with the chance of receiving higher awards.

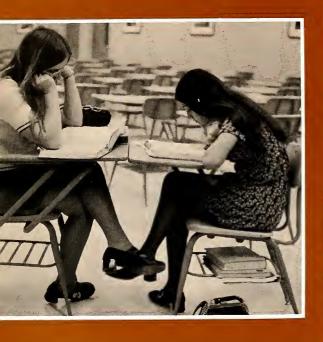

The Theatre Arts class provided the backdrops for the school play and the annual talent show. They also produced miniature films that were shown on WANE-TV at Christmastime.

Art classes worked on silk screens, oil paintings and drawings of student models. The students also made Christmas decorations for the cafeteria and other artwork for the halls.

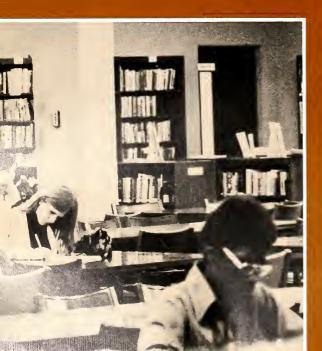

Sketching from models, sophomores Patty Gay and Michelle Kelaris put the finishing touches on their drawings.

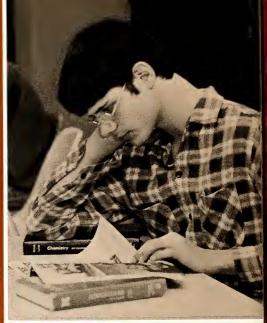

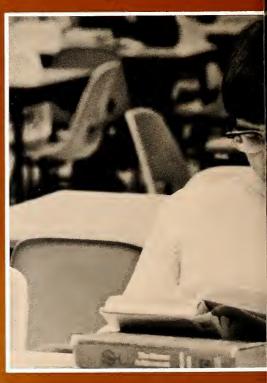

Working together on a class assignment, juniors Gioria Fahlsing and Paula Smith help each other study in preparation for their next class.

Using the library facilities to work on special projects, junior Debby Fremion, junior Starla Goshorn, and senior Cliff Davis work individually to finish them.

Having already finished his homework during study hall, sophomore Kevin Young spends the rest of the period reading a library book.

Foreign languages expand knowledge

The several language classes used different methods to further the students' knowledge of the language. The language lab, dialogues and skits all helped in this purpose.

The Latin class wrote original plays and then produced them. In May, the students made Trojan head plaques and sold them at the Festus Romana; this was held at Wayne High School and all Latin classes in the city participated.

The second year French classes had more independence. They worked by themselves with tapes and dialogues.

German classes spent the year studying different phases of grammar. Movies worked as supplements in learning about life in Germany.

Spanish classes went to Don Pedro's for dinner. They also went to see the movie "Man of La Mancha."

Explaining various methods of using the language lab, Mr. David Mitchell prepares his second year German class for working on a new dialogue.

Helping each other memorize a new assignment in their French class, juniors Cindy Kline and Vicki Rosenbaum work to get it down perfectly.

Doing an original play in Latin class, seniors Matt Hunter, Theresa DeRose, sophomores Terry Brutton and Dave Reinhart show it to the rest of the class.

Enjoying a meal at Don Pedro's restaurant, sophomore Renee Harter samples different Spanish foods when her class went there for dinner.

Using the cue sheets in her Spanish book, junior Paula Smith works on the dialogues corresponding with the cue sheet.

Gymnastics work on basics, skills for possible team

This year, the Gymnastics Club was involved in several activities. A few of the members travelled to Indiana State University at Terre Haute where they viewed a meet between the Hungarian Gymnastic Team and the Indiana State Team.

During halftime at a basketball game, the club exhibited their talents by doing a routine consisting of mat stunts. As a soloist, senior Sue Quance performed a routine to the song "Danny Boy".

The skit was performed for the Christmas assembly.

Y-Teen shares in national convention

Sponsoring several annual projects, Y-teens also provided some new ones.

Earning needed funds, they began the year with a car wash. They also sold scented marking pens and stationery.

At Christmas time they sponsored the annual Miss Virginia Project. It provided food, clothes and other items for the needy children of Fort Wayne. For the PTA, they collected money for needy families in the Elmhurst area. Displaying their Christmas spirit, Y-teens presented a funny skit based on the song "The Twelve Days of Christmas".

Attending the Midwinter Conference, Y-teen girls heard speakers and participated in programs.

In March, junior Julie Langmeyer attended the National Convention in San Diego. Also in March, a yoga demonstration was presented by Miss Sharon Wagner, an Instructor from the YWCA.

The summer conference, held in June, was attended by many Elmhurst representatives.

Voted in by the members, president Nancy Wolfe, vice-president Debbie Lichstinn, secretary Barb Abbott, and devotions chairman Chris Berry led the activities.

Sponsoring the club for a second year was Miss Susan Highfill.

Services performed by active clubs

The annual Christmastime Toys for Tots project, sponsored by the Youth Council, started a successful year. In January, they participated in the Red Cross Council Carnival at the Veteran's Hospital. The entire city participated. Also, aided by members of the Youth Council, many seniors donated blood to the Red Cross Blood Drive at Maplewood School.

Selling cokes provided the Phi-Chem Club with all of their funds. These funds were specified for science scholarships. Films on lasers and conservation were also viewed by the club.

The Red Cross Council became the Youth Council in order to take over the duties of the defunct Student Council.

Concert features soloists

Helping celebrate the Christmas season, the orchestra presented a concert in December.

For the third year in a row, the orchestra was awarded a first division rating in the NISBOVA contest.

In February, the Concerto Concert featured Bill Meyers, Terri Lipp and Mrs. Herrero as soloists. At the Spring Concert, student teacher, Miss Barbara Michalski, led the orchestra.

The special awards for spirit, leadership, musicianship and the most improved player were presented at the awards banquet in May.

Forming a cello duet, seniors Claudia Weiss and Dan Fortriede play their part during the Christmas Concert.

Keeping up with the beat are sophomores Dan Schory on the drums and Mark Benson playing the cymbals.

Pom-pom squad centers around themes

A new addition to this year's halftime entertainment was the pom-pom squad. They performed routines with pom-poms, gloves and flags. They centered their shows around themes. Samples of the themes used by the squad were a patriotic and a carnival theme. They were also in charge of the flag ceremonies at the beginning of the games. The pom-pom squad participated in a NISBOVA contest where they earned a first place.

The twirler and pom-pom squads visited junior highs to stimulate interest and later in the year sponsored clinics for twirling and pom-pom training.

The twirlers routines were also centered around a theme. Three of their themes were Spanish, carnival and floor show. They surprised the crowd when the head twirlers performed a routine with fire batons.

The twirlers participated in several categories in NISBOVA competition. They performed to music provided for them and earned a first place rating.

This year the cheerleaders were motivated by senior captain, Debbie Lichtsinn. The varsity squad attended a camp at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin where Debbie won a third place trophy for her poise and abilities.

The varsity cheerleaders also helped with the cheerleader tryouts. From these try-outs the reserve cheerleaders were chosen.

This was the first year the squad was sponsored by Mrs. Carol Pugsley. Even though there was no booster club, the Elmhurst fans organized their own cheerblock and aided the cheerleaders.

Two of the duties of the cheerleaders were to attend all sporting events and promote school spirit.

At the Sectional basketball tournament, sophomore reserve cheerleader, Marcia Starks, displays anxiety.

ADVANCE covers local and national events; Keeps student in touch, provides editorials

The ADVANCE kept up with current local and national events by covering such local events as Spiro Agnew and Ted Kennedy's visits to Fort Wayne and the local elections. The ADVANCE covered national events including the presidential election, the Vietnam War and integration laws.

The staff provided editorials on school policies, racial problems, the Vietnam War, abortion, political arguments and school apathy.

Due to lack of funds at the beginning of the year, the size of the paper was changed to lower the cost.

The ADVANCE earned an A + rating from the NSPA last year, placing them among the top 17 high schools in the nation.

Unique yearbook designs bring frustrations, reward

Advised by Mrs. Marlene Schultz, the 1973 Anlibrum staff consisted mainly of underclassmen in editor's positions. Frustration, experience and socializing became everyday occurances to sophomores who learned to work quite independently.

This year's theme, "Perpetual Expression", was selected at last summer's Ball State Workshop, attended by Phil Hershberger, Neil Bussard, Greg Hershberger, Terry Emmons, Holly Miller and Pam Reyburn.

A new style of yearbook layouts were used, derived from magazines such as Look and Life.

Sophomores see varsity action

Reserve football is the building block for future varsity teams.

This year the team gained a lot of experience for their varsity years. They started practice in the summer as did the varsity and learned many new things about the game. A big reason the team did learn a lot about varsity ball was that they did scrimmage with them quite often.

The team was coached by Bill Derbyshire and John Sweet. They produced a fine bunch of ballplayers who in return produced a record of two wins and four losses.

The only sophomore on the team to see a lot of action was Gary Howard. Gary showed excellent speed and knowledge of the game and was played quite often as a safety and running back. A few other sophomores did dress for varsity games throughout the season but none saw the action Gary did.

Sophomores Gary Imel and Willie Cole put on an effective rush for the quarterback during the Luer's game.

Don Georgi gets set to tackle an opponent a team-mate already has under control.

Cagers set back early in sectional play

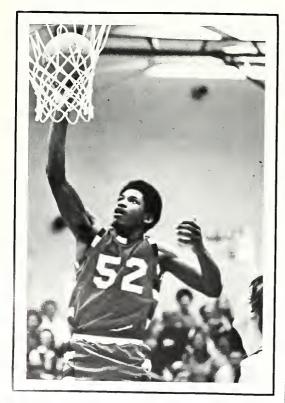

After starting their season out at a fast pace with four straight wins the varsity basketball team slowed down and finished the year with a fourteen and six record.

The team with its four returning lettermen proved during the regular season that they could handle any given team on any given night by defeating Snider 89 to 59. Snider eliminated Elmhurst in Sectional play 100 to 82.

Head coach Kenny Eytcheson and his assistant John Bunnell produced two All City players from their starting five. They were juniors Kevin Howell and Donald Taylor.

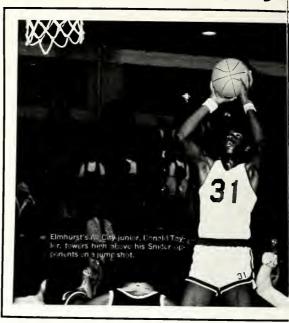

Four of the five starters for the team were juniors and will be back forming a strong backbone for next year's squad. Including Howell and Taylor they were Steve Ransom and Julius Stephens.

The team will be losing six players due to graduation. These seniors are Matt Hunter, Jeff Hibler, Dave Butler, Alfred Curry, Bob Paschall and John Adams.

Senior Bob Paschall shows his excellent quickness as he stops Luer's All City guard Larry Freeman's progress toward the basket.

Underclass basketball excellent

Reserve and sophomore basketball was a strong point in Elmhurst athletics this year. The teams respectively recorded records of 12-6 and 12-4.

The reserve team was coached by John Bunnell and the sophomores were headed by Phil Habegger. Only one sophomore saw any action in varsity play during the year and that was Larry Reese. Reese saw a lot of action in sectionals which is very unusual for a sophomore.

Many of the reserve losses came in the last few minutes of play showing that they were really even better than their record shows.

The sophomore team won its only tourney of the season by defeating North Side and Wayne.

The two teams gained alot of experience towards their varsity years and should be big assets to future varsity teams at Elmhurst. These underclassmen should prove to be very important to next year's varsity team.

Junior Cliff Davis tries a difficult shot from behind the backboard in the Luers game.

Larry Reese was the only sophomore to see varsity action in sectionals this year. Here he attempts an easy layup.

Trojan baseball team Section

Some say records don't always prove how good a team really is. Well head baseball coach Bill Derbyshire and his assistant Warren Bistline proved this true by leading their team from a regular season record of ten wins and ten losses to sectional champions.

Witke was the first team the Trojans met in sectional play and they ousted them 14-6. Next the team defeated host Columbia City 3-2 which placed them into the finals with the Carroll Chargers. In a tough contest the Elmhurst nine won 1-0.

At the regionals Elmhurst was defeated by Fort Wayne Northrop 9-8 in a very controversial game.

The Elmhurst nine was led by five returning letterman. Jeff Hibler and Dave Butler were the only seniors on the list. Juniors Bernie Kampschmidt, Ken Butler and Eric Russell were the other three ball players.

Next season Elmhurst should be as tough as ever. They will lose only three due to graduation. Jeff Hibler, Dave Butler, and John Adams will all graduate.

Juniors Ken Butler, Greg Marden, and Eric Russell along with sophomore Dave Campbell were all placed on the All-Regional team. These players will all be back next season serving as the backbone for the team.

Two players received very important honors at the close of the season. Junior Bernie Kampschmidt was chosen as most valuable player while Senior Dave Butler became the first player to ever receive three letters.

Pitchers and first basemen Bernie Kampschmidt and Len Brown congratulate Dave Campbell on scoring a run. Kenny Butler is shown crossing home plate after a team-mate drove him in against South Side.

Outstanding individuals in track

Elmhurst's track team had a few individual standouts for the 1973 season, but mainly this was a rebuilding year for them.

Sophomore Gary Howard was the only state contender on the team getting to the state meet as a hurdler. Senior Nate Brown was considered the fastest man on the team as he ran the 220, 440 and anchored the 880 relay team. Nate held an area best in the 440 for a portion of the season.

The team record was 5 wins and 8 losses while placing 4th in the sectionals and advanced hurdler Gary Howard to the regional and state meet.

Another area best was held by Elmhurst early in the season and that was by junior Randy Reher in the high jump. Another junior Harold Essex was one of the three best high jumpers in the area.

Ending their season with an average six wins six losses record, the reserve wrestling team gained a lot of experience which could aid next year's varsity squad.

Looking at individual records there were many outstanding wrestlers on the team. Peter Hill was the only member on the team to go undefeated as he made a showing of five wins. Sophomores Greg Hershberger and Jed Chase each had a six and two record while sophomore Tim Freeman lost only one match in eight.

The reserve team was coached by Mr. Gary Eager. His main objective during the season was to prepare his team for varsity competition.

Golf team lacks needed depth

Elmhurst's golf team, coached by Nick Werling, rounded their 1973 season out with a 6-13 record along with a 9th place showing at sectionals. Junior Dave Huffman was the only returning letterman on the squad but seniors Steve Williams and Jeff Green and junior John Wright were all veterans from the previous season. These four men and two sophomores Jed Chase and Mike Arnold usually were the men choosen to play in the varsity matches for Elmhurst.

The team either practiced or competed in a match every night during their spring season. Most of the team's home matches were played at the Brookwood golf course.

Green and Williams will be lost due to graduation. The loss of these two men will hurt the team but others on the team became much more aquainted with the game and should be able to carry the load next year.

Coaches find rewards, frustrations

Coaches at Elmhurst through-out the year devoted their time to many aspects of athletics. They always had the difficult job promoting sportmanship along with the pressures of trying to gain a winning season.

Always acting as leaders they had to hold up the school reputation by handling their athletes in a most professional way.

To achieve a winning season coaches had to put their teams in the right prospective before each contest. To do this they had to gain the respect of their athletes. There's always the athlete who can't stick it out and this one has little respect for the coach. It's impossible for the coach to gain everyones respect, but a good coach usually gains most everyones. Elmhurst coaches did an exceptional job of doing that this year.

Elmhurst coaches worked all season to condition their athletes mentally and physically and proved to be very important to them.

Solemnity repressing lighter moods, 333 Elmhurst graduates left behind 12 years of school with the final shift of the tassel from right to left and entered a world of individuality on June 7 at the Memorial Coliseum.

Building to the climax of the diplomas, the Reverand Philbrook of the First Baptist church in Fort Wayne posed the question to each attentive ear, "Are you grown up?" in the hopes that each graduate would take a more mature stand in life and try to succeed in whatever each individual decides to pursue.

Presenting diplomas for the last time as principal of Elmhurst High School, Principal Charles Eichkoff read off each name and presented each graduate his diploma. Assisting him was Robert Miller, Assistant Principal, who congratulated each graduate.

Leaving the Coliseum floor to the tune of the school song, many sang the familiar words perhaps for the last time in a meditative mood and contemplated the beginning of a new and exciting, although somewhat different world of individual choice and freedom.

Sandy McCabe takes a moment to think of the past and ponder the future before the exercises begin.

UNDERCLASS

Sophomores look at juniors in wonderment.
Juniors look at seniors in awe.
Seniors look at the world they're about to confront,
And wonder if underclassmen don't have it better after all.

Sophomores adjust to high school

With high hopes and lots of spirit the class of '75 invaded Elmhurst. To the sophomores the first few weeks meant finding each class, meeting new friends and checking out the teachers.

For sophomore class president, Lyle Howard was chosen. Sophomore Ed Peters served as vice-president.

Member of the varsity track team, sophomore Gary Howard set a new high hurdles record in the Hoosier Relays. Also, sophomore Amy Beatty attended a school in Illinois where she excelled in ballet.

Those who can inspire thought upon others are truly rare, for it is they who hold the key to unlock the minds of future generations.

Nancy Frebel

Principal retires, plans new life

The second principal in Elmhurst's history retired this year after 42 years of school service, all of these to Elmhurst.

Born and raised in the Waynedale area, Mr. Eickhoff and wife Martha reside on a large plot of land where they have raised two sons, numerous animals and various crops.

During his teaching career in mathematics and social studies, Mr. Eickhoff also sponsored many club activities, one of the most popular being the yearly magazine sales. According to Mr. Eickhoff, thousand of dollars worth of magazines were sold by student and part of the earnings purchased the present-da public address system in the school.

Mr. Eickhoff has seen Elmhurst though many change both physical and emotional during his 15-year-stin as principal. He summed up by saying, "This is fine school, a fine community, and there is great pro mise in our future."

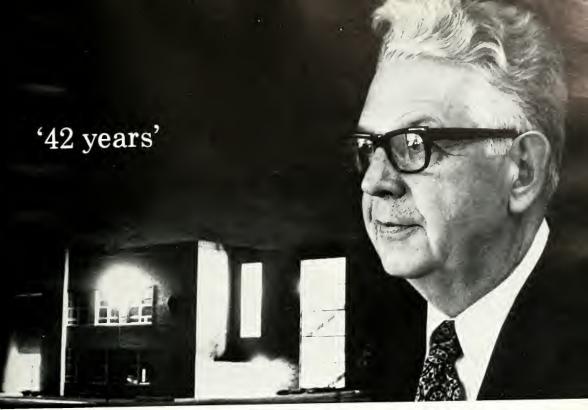

In a series of pictures taken at his retirement dinner, Mr. Eickhoff is seen first in front of backdrop created by Mr. Goss. During the dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Eickhoff share a funny momento, introduce their son to an old friend and watch as Mr. Miller presents a "bull a-award" to the principal.

Mr. Eickhoff takes a morning coffee break with the office staff.

Briefing incoming principal, Richard Horstmeyer, Mr. Eickhoff tries to sum up in a few short hours the knowledge he has accumulated through the years.

Bush, Pugsley leave; Pennington, Anderson retur

Four major positions changed hands at the close of the school year. Aside from our retiring principal, Athletic Director, Mr. Jerry Bush left for a new position as assistant football coach at Harding High School. Mrs. Carol Pugsley, after one year's duration as Dean of Girls returned to her former school, Portage. Replacing her will be former Elmhurst English teacher, Mrs.

Susan Anderson.

After serving one year as Guidance Coordinator, N Douglass Spencer will return to his former positic and Mrs. Grace Pennington will return in the top gui ance spot, after serving one year downtown. Mr. Mille Mr. Geyer and Mr. Sinks will return in their same ca acities for the '73-'74 school year.

Making a strong point, Mr. Miller emphasizes last minute changes in the English schedule to Mrs. Prue Oberlin and other teachers at a semester preak meeting.

Former Dean of Girls, Mrs. Mary Fast returns for a faculty dinner with daughter, Julie Jean.

Besides teaching their regular classes, some teachers sponsored clubs or coached. During the spring, Mr. Warren Bistline Coached baseball as an assistant.

Basketball was Mr. John Bunnell's sport for which he served his fifth year as coach.

Phi-Chem club sold cokes at home basketball games. Mr. Randy Brugh arranged outside activities such as the Jazz Festival.

Mrs. Sharon Banks sponsored the Afro American Club, while Mrs. Dinah Cashman participated in community and college plays.

Mr. John Bunnell displays his emotions during the Sectional basketball game against the Snider Panthers.

At an after school buffet, teachers Mrs. Lucy Doswell, Mr. Charles Beck and Mr. John Sweet find it difficult to choose the appropriate foods.
